

Moore County's advances in information technology has earned it a high national ranking from the National Association Of Counties. Moore was ranked seventh nationwide among counties with populations under 150,000. It is the second year that Moore has been placed among the top ten digital counties. Darlene Yudell, Moore County's Director Of Information Technology since 2008, says her department has been contacted by other counties anxious to modernize their own I-T Programs. The Association Of Counties says Moore's I-T initiative provides vital cost savings and administrative efficiencies. Yudell gives a lot of credit to Commissioners Larry Caddell, Nick Picerno and Tim Lea who insist on being fully informed. "As a result the year," she says, "Very supportive of what we are doing." Adding- "it's great for the county to have this level of interest in technology."